1 I'm interested in an AMP program! Now what?

____Speak with the program director of your intended program about eligibility and career goal fit.

____Talk with your undergrad advisor about your interest in the program during your next advising appointment.

2 I met with my advisor and the program director. I meet the requirements for the AMP program.

____Complete the Intent Application. This application states you currently intend, and are eligible, to begin taking dual counting courses during your bachelor's degree.
(Just a reminder: This does not admit you into the graduate program.)

3 I filled out the Intent Application. What's next?

Your application will go to your program for review! Once your application is approved:
____Enroll in your dual counting courses.
(Pro tip: Always check with your program on the number of hours you are allowed to take and which ones are approved.)

4 During my final year of undergraduate coursework, I should:

____Apply to the graduate program using the online Graduate School application.
(Just a reminder: Each program has different application deadlines! Check these dates early!)

____Check with your program on any additional documents you might need for your graduate school application.

→ If you are admitted to the AMP graduate program, graduate level courses taken during undergrad will count towards both your bachelors and masters degree requirements.

____Finish your bachelors degree requirements and graduate!

5 I completed my Bachelor's degree and I have been admitted to the AMP graduate program:

____Ensure you are enrolled in your next set/sequence of advised graduate level courses that correspond with your program curriculum.
(Pro tip: Check with your program advisor on which courses you should enroll in. Your registration date can be found in your student portal or by contacting the Registrar's Office.)

6 During my Master's Program:

____Complete your remaining requirements for your Master's degree and apply for graduation.
